

Information and Legal Requests

Last updated: June 2026

This policy is for Roblox (including its Trust and Safety, platform, and legal teams) and for law enforcement and government authorities who need to make a request to the operators of this Forum. It explains what information we hold, where most requests should actually go, and how to contact us.

This policy is for information only. It does not create any contractual obligation, and it is not a promise to take any particular action in any particular case. It is not legal advice. We review every request for validity and may object where appropriate, and we reserve all rights and objections available to us.

1. About the Forum and the data we hold

The Forum is an experience that runs on the Roblox platform. We hold only a limited amount of information. This consists of your Roblox user ID, username, and display name, the topics and replies you post, your activity in the Forum (including the accounts you follow, your notifications, and any reports or appeals you submit), any support requests you open, and our moderation records (such as warnings, mutes, and bans). This data is stored on our external systems, which run on Amazon Web Services in the European Union behind a Cloudflare gateway. We do not hold your real name, email address, password, phone number, postal address, payment information, precise location, or IP address.

2. Important: most identifying data is held by Roblox, not us

Because we do not hold real-world identifying information, any request that seeks that kind of data, including the identity behind an account, an email address, a phone number, payment information, or IP address, should be directed to Roblox, which is the platform provider and the controller for that information. Roblox operates its own process for law enforcement and legal requests. We are not able to provide information that we do not hold.

3. Requests from Roblox

Roblox staff (including Trust and Safety, platform, and legal teams) can contact us through the Forum's in-game support system or through any channel Roblox has established with us. On a valid request from Roblox, we can:

- Provide the Forum Content and activity associated with a given Roblox user ID;
- Act on a Right to Erasure request that Roblox forwards to us, by deleting the Forum data associated with that user (see the Privacy Policy); and
- Remove or restrict Content or accounts, and cooperate with a Roblox investigation, where this is consistent with our policies and the Roblox Terms.

4. Requests from law enforcement and government authorities

If you are a law enforcement or government official, you can contact us through the Forum's in-game support system. We will only disclose information where we are required to do so by applicable law, and only in a way that is consistent with the Privacy Policy and the Roblox Terms. We review each request for validity and may decline or object to requests that are vague, overbroad, unlawful, or that seek information we do not hold. Where we are permitted to do so, we will try to notify the affected user before disclosing their information, unless we are prohibited from giving notice or unless the request involves an emergency or a child-safety matter. In many cases, because the identifying data you are seeking is held by Roblox rather than by us, the correct route will be a request to Roblox.

5. Emergency requests

Where there is a credible risk of imminent death or serious physical harm to a person, and we hold information that could help prevent it, we may provide limited information without waiting for formal legal process, to the extent permitted by applicable law. Because we hold very little information, emergencies should also be raised with Roblox and with local emergency services. Any falsified or fraudulent emergency request may itself be reported to the authorities.

6. Child-safety escalations

We treat the safety of minors as a priority. Any content that appears to involve the sexual exploitation of a minor is reported to Roblox immediately so that it can be escalated to the appropriate authorities through Roblox's processes, and we cooperate with those processes.

7. Content removal requests from authorities

Law enforcement and government authorities may ask us to remove content they believe breaks the Community Rules or local law. When you make such a request, please provide a link to the specific Content on the Forum, an explanation of why you believe it is unlawful or breaks our Rules (including the specific law, where relevant), and any supporting documentation. We review each request under our Community Rules and applicable law. Where content does not break our Rules but is determined to be unlawful in a particular country, we may restrict access to it in that country.

8. EU Digital Services Act and reporting illegal content

If you are an authority in the European Union, or an individual or entity with rights in the EU, you can report content that you believe is illegal in the EU through the Forum's in-game support system, with enough detail and supporting material for us to assess it. We will review the report and may restrict access to or remove content that we determine is illegal in the relevant country. Roblox, as the platform provider, also maintains platform-wide processes relevant to the EU Digital Services Act.

9. How to contact us and what to include

Please send requests through the Forum's in-game support system. To help us review a request, please make it in writing and include the relevant Roblox user ID, a link to or clear identification of the specific Content at issue, and the legal basis for the request. Requests that do not include this information may take longer to review.

10. No commitment, and changes to this policy

We do not commit to taking any specific action, or to acting within any particular timeframe. We may update this policy at any time, and the "Last updated" date at the top will change.
